Andrew,

I can't believe I left you off this email list. Sorry. Here is what I sent out to everyone a little while ago.

Subject: EZ staffing changes

Beginning next week, there will be a few staffing changes in EZ about which I wanted to inform you.

First, Andrew Brissette will be leaving NEHA as of October 1st. With a background in architectural design, Andrew is pursuing interests in that field. Andrew has done a brilliant job organizing, updating and automating processes that were disorganized and confusing. He has managed the trainers and proctors well, and has streamlined the trainer application process and exam request procedures. He will leave us with a much stronger system and department than when he arrived.

The areas of environmental health and food safety had not been fields of study for Andrew, and he, in practice, knew very little about our work when he came on board. Over the past year, he has continuously worked to increase his working knowledge, with impressive speed and retention. He will be missed.

Second, Soni Fink will take over responsibility for the trainers and proctors. She will be, I am sure, an excellent contact and resource for current trainers and to our growing list of new trainers. Soni, as some of you might be aware, has to manage two supervisors – she reports to both Jill C and me. Soni will continue with her work with the AEC exhibitors and sponsors along with her new duties in EZ.

Third, on Tuesday, please welcome Brenda Voloshin to the EZ team. She will take over the role of EZ Support, which is a growing area of customer support, online training support, and research. Brenda has a background with the Peace Corps, and with policy and legislation in DC. She will be a great addition to the NEHA team.
